

Wild
Lotté Jean

let us bloom
in the wilderness
that resides in our minds cut back the thorns and trim the overgrown lands let the flowers pour through and see the garden flourish.

Lotté Jean is an author from Northeast England who began as an avid reader before picking up a pen one day and started using her imagination as a tool to create a new universe just like her favorite fictional ones. Through literature, she saw a whole new world open up, and ever since she put pen to page, she has not stopped diving into the deepest parts of the mind and pulled out words that could inspire through poetry or start an adventure with a new character. When she isn't writing novels, poetry, or screenplays with her sister Francesca, Lotté loves nothing more than to find inspiration for life through art films, music, exploring museums, and language learning. She loves to explore the deepest meaning behind things and gain new perspectives of the world in which we inhabit.